AM. ADVENTURE IN PUBLIC EDUCATION

UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR GIVES COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS.

The final scene of the commencement exercises of the Class of 1922 occurred Thursday night at the School auditorium. Prof. Clifford Woody of the University of Michigan was the speaker and he took for his theme the subject "American adventure in Education."

He went back to the year 1640 when a town in Massachusetts passed a law compelling parents and teachers to work for the education of the people, and went thru the several phases of education up to the present time when, in America, it is possible for everyone to receive an education. The speaker stated that there had been, at the time of the signing of the declaration, a general interest in education, and it was generally conceded that if the government lives it will be because of our education. Thus the founders of our government proceeded with plans for the general education of our people.

He stated that the real struggle for education came during the period of 1830 to 1850, when there was a renewal of effort to educate the people so that they might better conduct the government, claiming that ignorance and illiteracy are the worst investments any nation can make.

His comparison of the earning power of a boy who quits school at the age of 14 years, and the high school graduate, was interesting. The former receives an average wage of $14.00 per week while the average wage of the high school graduate is $35 per week.

To demonstrate the rapid growth of our schools he stated that there was but one high school in the year of 1841; at the close of the Civil war there were 500 and at the present time there are more than 17,000 in the United States.

The first compulsory school law was passed in 1852. In the year 1890 there were in Michigan 2,000 high school pupils and at the present time there are 19,000. The high school attendance is eight times greater than 20 years ago.

Prof. Woody pointed out the danger of the present "retrenchment" period, wherein some cities are reducing their school curriculum and thus reducing the teaching force. This, he said we cannot afford to do and pointed out the danger of this.

For a Better Town.

CONDUCTED BY THE GRAYLING BOARD OF TRADE.

PUBLIC NOTICE, SERVED ON THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL MEN OF GRAYLING.

A meeting of our business men was called for Monday evening, June 19th, at 8 p. m. at the Board of Trade club rooms, for the purpose of discussing several important subjects pertaining to the welfare of our business men, their business and their duties to this community and surrounding country. Practically every business man was notified of this meeting and personally invited to be present. At about 8:30 p. m. the meeting was called to order by the President of the Board of Trade. Very few of the business men were present, so few in fact that it leads one to believe that our business men are positively dead. All we need is to have them buried. This town needs live wires in business, real go-getters, and if the men who are now in business will not get out to a meeting called for their own benefit it is time they pulled out and let some one in who is a live wire. The time has come for all the business men of this town to get together and co-operate, or go down and backward. Our town is positively standing still and our business men are to blame. They must get together at once and co-operate for their mutual benefit as well as for the town and surrounding country.

Another meeting of our business men is called for Monday evening, June 26th, at 8 p. m. at the Board of Trade rooms. Every business man in Grayling is asked now to arrange his affairs so that he can attend that meeting. It matters not what line of business he is in—Butcher, Tailor, Grocer or Blacksmith, he must be at that meeting for his own personal benefit. Every man present will be checked against a list of all our business men and those who fail to be present at this meeting will be listed in this column next Thursday as dead ones. The live wires in this town positively will not keep pushing the whole load alone. You and every man in business will have to lend your aid or be advertised to the community as a poor asset. Be present at the meeting Monday June 26th and avoid having your name appear in this column next Thursday.

Our Board of Trade has been doing all they can for our town. They must have more help. Our merchants are not members of this board nor are they lending their assistance in any way. Our creamery was brought here thru the efforts of the Board of Trade, and our merchants are not giving the creamery one iota of co-operation. They order their butter from out of town, pay freight and drayage when they can buy just as good or better butter made in Grayling for less money. I say that is d—rotten. I know of a merchant who had an order for several pounds of Grayling butter—promised to deliver it to his customer, and when the delivery was made another brand of butter made outside of town was substituted. That butter was promptly returned by the customer. Every grocer in town could and should sell Grayling made butter and keep the money at home and thereby show their appreciation of what the Board of Trade has done. All our Grayling people should use the products of this creamery and insist on having Grayling made butter from your grocer and keep the money at home.

Furthermore we have in our town a good bakery. Good products are turned out in that bakery. Just as good bread or better than any from outside is made in our local bakery, but never-the-less there are now four other brands of bread being sold in Grayling, no better in quality, but considerably higher in price. Again our merchants are not doing their duty. Three grocers in this town selling Grayling made bread. Once more I say to our good people in Grayling, order Grayling bread from your grocer and insist on having it, thereby keeping the money at home and boosting your town.

Our merchants are continually finding fault and kicking their heads off because some one does not patronize home people. Our merchants are mighty lax on this principle themselves. It would be a mighty good idea for each one to correct their own faults along this line first and then their grievance would bear listening to. If our merchants are going to progress it is time they were sitting up and taking a little interest in what is going around town instead of trying to roll all the dollars thru their own doors.

Unless we get busy and boost for Grayling, and co-operate with the Board of Trade we are going back, back, backward. This means every business man in Grayling. Get out next Monday evening and rub shoulders with your fellow business man—you will feel better for it. Co-operate.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

GRAYLING WINS FROM K. OF CS.

"BABE" LAURANT PITCHES FAULTLESS BALL, ALLOWING ONE HIT IN 12 INNINGS.

With seven straight victories under their belt the Grayling base ball team clashed with the strong K. of C. team of Bay City Saturday and Sunday taking both games. Fans expected to see some close games, and they had the opportunity Saturday of seeing one of the prettiest games of ball ever played on the home field, and no doubt one of the closest played by any two amateur teams in Michigan. Goose eggs formed the score for eleven innings on both sides; while Grayling had chances at times to score they were nixed out each time by their adversaries. In the twelfth inning came the climax when Otto Nelson, playing his first game of the year drew out a single and reached first, and the score that won the game for Grayling was tallied when "Fuzzy" Reynolds, Grayling's shortstop beat out one to the field fence scoring Nelson. "Babe" Laurant on the mound for Grayling was at his best, allowing but one hit during the whole game.

"ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL"

In this production "Doug" has achieved the ambition of his life—and registers with it, what is by all odds the great, outstanding success of his career. His is a remarkable, clear-cut portrayal of the noble D'Artagnan, the wonderful hero of Dumas' amazing novel of Mediaeval France.

This tremendous film is the happy culmination of a desire of years on Fairbanks' part to enact what is considered to be the most striking and heroic figure in the entire history of literature.

700 OFFICERS AND MEN IN CAMP

OFFICERS REPORT IDEAL CONDITIONS AND SUCCESSFUL ENCAMPMENT.

The Michigan National Guard of 700 officers and ten selected men from each company, now in camp at the Hanson State Military reservation near this city are under command of Brig. Gen. Earl R. Stewart of Grand Rapids. He is assisted by Executive Officer Maj. James Sinka. Maj. Leroy Pearson, quartermaster general, is custodian of the camp and is also acting as supply officer.

Other officers in camp are as follows: Col. John S. Bersey; Col. Samuel D. Pepper, judge advocate; Major Harold Loomis, state ordnance officer; Maj. C. H. Tower, quartermaster corps finance officer, and Capt. Geo. C. Kieber, assistant to Major Pearson; all of the State military department. Besides the above there are Col. Guy N. Wilson, of the 125th Infantry; Col. Jos. H. Lewis, of the 119th field artillery; Col. John H. Scouten, of the 126th Infantry; Lieut.-Col. Edgar H. Campbell, commander of provisional battalion; Maj. Thos. Calladay, of the 125th Infantry; Capt. Jos. McDonald, provisional Co. A; Capt. Louis J. Donovan, provisional Co. B; Capt. Edward E. Damon, provisional Co. D; and Capt. Geo. B. Ely, provisional Co. G.

This camp is principally for the instruction of officers and select numbers of men of the M. N. G. In all there are 150 commissioned officers and 600 men in camp. Maj. Loren C. Grieve, senior U. S. A. instructor has full charge of the instruction work. He is assisted by Maj. Richard Cummins, cavalry, U. S. A.; Capt. M. D. Sevalle, infantry, U. S. A.; Captain Roe, field artillery, U. S. A.; Capt. M. G. Bush, infantry, U. S. A.; and twelve U. S. A. sergeants.

The camp opened Monday and will last four days. The instruction work will cover nearly all branches of military service, such as drilling, rifle practice, machine gun, field artillery, clerical work, cooking, transportation, and first aid.

This encampment is preliminary to the main summer camp which will be held early in August, when it is expected that there will be about 4,000 officers and men in camp, comprising all the units of the Michigan guard except the artillery which will receive its training at Camp Custer.

In an interview with Major Grieve, senior U. S. instructor, he states that the encampment thus far has been highly successful in every respect. The weather has been ideal, there is excellent spirit among the troops, and the spirit of team-work prevails in all branches. Much of the success in the instruction work he attributes to the fact that every officer had been instructed by Gen. Stewart several weeks before hand as to the plans of the encampment and just what he was expected to do, thus enabling each one to study up and be prepared for the work that was coming.

Everyone is cheerful thruout the camp and there have been no unpleasantness to mar the camp, and there have been no cases of illness reported. While off duty many of the men have enjoyed the bathing in Lake Margrethe and the boating and fishing and many fine catches have been made a six-pound black bass holding the record for size.

The work in camp will finish Thursday night, June 22 and the troops will board trains for their respective home stations early Friday morning.

"LUKE'S HERE!"

SYNOPSIS—Wealthy and highly placed in the Chicago business world, Benjamin Corvet is something of a recluse and a mystery to his associates. After a stormy interview with his partner, Henry Spearman, Corvet seeks Constance Sherrill, daughter of his other business partner, Lawrence Sherrill, and secures from her a promise not to marry Spearman until he returns. He then disappears. Sherrill learns Corvet has written to certain Alan Conrad, a youth of unknown parentage, to Chicago. Alan arrives in Chicago. From a statement of Sherrill it seems probable Conrad is Corvet's illegitimate son. Corvet has deeded his house and its contents to Alan, who takes possession. That night Alan discovers a man ransacking the desks and bureau drawers in Corvet's apartments. The appearance of Alan tremendously agitates the intruder, who appears to think him a ghost and raves of "the Miwaka." After a struggle the man escapes. Next day Alan learns from Sherrill that Corvet has deeded his entire property to him. Introduced to Spearman, Alan is astonished at the discovery that he is the man whom he had fought in his house the night before. Alan tells no one of his strange encounter, but in a private interview takes Spearman with the fact. Spearman laughs at and defies him. Spearman poisons Constance's mind against Alan. Somebody tries to kill Alan in the night.

CHAPTER X.

A Caller.

As the first of the month was approaching, Wassaquum had brought his household bills and budget to Alan that morning directly after breakfast. To furnish Alan with whatever sums he needed, Sherrill had made a considerable deposit in Alan's name in the bank; where he carried his own account; and Alan had accompanied Sherrill to the bank to be introduced and had signed the necessary cards in order to check against the deposit.

Alan had required barely half of the hundred dollars which Benjamin Corvet had sent to Blue Rapids, for his expenses in Chicago; and he had brought with him from "home" a hundred dollars of his own.

The amount which Wassaquum now desired to pay the bills was much more than Alan had on hand; but that amount was also much less than the eleven hundred dollars which the servant listed as cash on hand. This, Wassaquum stated, was in currency and kept by him. Benjamin always had had him keep that much in the house; Wassaquum would not touch that sum now for the payment of current expenses.

On the first of the month, therefore, Alan drew upon his new bank account to Wassaquum's order, and in the early afternoon Wassaquum went to the bank to cash his check—one of the very few occasions when Alan had been left in the house alone; Wassaquum's habit, it appeared, was to go about on the first of the month and pay the tradesmen in person.

Some two hours later, and before Wassaquum could have been expected back, Alan, in the room which had become his, was startled by a sound of heavy pounding, which came suddenly to him from a floor below. Shouts—heavy, thick, and unintelligible—mingled with the pounding. He ran swiftly down the stairs, then on and down the service stairs into the basement. The door to the house from the area-way was shaking to irregular, heavy blows, which stopped as Alan reached the lower hallway; the shouts continued still a moment more. Now that the noise of pounding did not interfere, Alan could make out what the man was saying. "Ben Corvet!"—the name was almost unintelligible—"Ben Corvet! Ben!" Then the shouts stopped, too.

Alan sped to the door and turned back the latch. The door here back upon him, not from a push, but from a weight without which had fallen against it. A big, heavy man, with a rough cap and mackinaw coat, would have fallen upon the floor if Alan had not caught him. His weight in Alan's arms was so dull, so inert, that, if violence had been his intention, there was nothing to be feared from him now. Alan looked up, therefore, to see if any one had come with him. The alley and the street were clear. The snow in the area-way showed that the man had come to the door alone and with great difficulty; he had fallen once upon the walk. Alan dragged the man into the house and went back and closed the door.

He returned and looked at him. The man was like, very like the one whom Alan had followed from the house on the night when he was attacked; certainly that this was the same man came quickly to him. He seized the fellow again and dragged him up the stairs and to the lounge in the library. The man, or had been, a very powerful man, broad and thick through with overdeveloped—almost distorting—muscles in his shoulders; but his body had become fat and soft, his face was puffed and his eyes watery and bright; his brown hair, which was shot all through with gray, was dirty and matted; he had three or four days' growth of beard. When he sat up and looked about it was plain that whiskey was only one of the forces working upon him—the other was fever which turned up and sustained him intermittently.

"To!" he greeted Alan. "Where's that d—n Injin, hey? I knew Ben Corvet was here—knew he was here all time. 'Course he's here; he got to be here. That's alright. You go get 'im!"

"Who are you?" Alan asked. "Say, who's you? What 'tells you doin' here? Never see you before. . . . go—go get Ben Corvet. Jus' say Ben Corvet, Lu—luke's here. Ben Corvet! I'll know Lu—luke all right; al—ways, alwaysh knows me. . . ."

"What's the matter with you?" Alan had drawn back but now went to the man again. The first idea that this might have been merely some old sailor or who had served Benjamin Corvet or, perhaps, had been a comrade in the earlier days, had been banished by the confident arrogance of the man's tone—con arrogance not to be explained, entirely, by whiskey or by the fever.

"How long have you been this way?" Alan demanded. "Where did you come from?" He put his hand on the wrist; it was very hot and dry; the pulse was racing, irregular; at seconds it seemed to stop; for other seconds it was continuous. The fellow coughed and bent forward. "What is it—pneumonia?" Alan tried to straighten him up.

"G! me drink! . . . Go get Ben Corvet, I tell you! . . . Get Ben Corvet quick! Say—yous hear? You get me Ben Corvet; you better get Ben Corvet; you tell him Lu—luke's here; won't wait any more; golin' 'thave my money now. . . . right away, your hear? K! me out 'slooin; I guess not no more. Ben Corvet give me all money I want or I talk!"

"Talk!"

"You know it! I ain't goin'!" He choked up and tottered back; Alan, supporting him, laid him down and stayed beside him until his coughing and choking ceased, and there was only the rattling rasp of his breathing. When Alan spoke to him again, Luke's eyes opened, and he narrated recent experiences bitterly; all were blamed to Ben Corvet's absence; Luke, who had been drinking heavily a few nights before, had been thrown out when the saloon was closed; that was Ben Corvet's fault; if Ben Corvet had been around, Luke would have had money, all the money any one wanted; no one would have thrown out Luke then. Luke slept in 'e snow, all wet. When he arose, the saloon was open again, and he got more whiskey, but not enough to get him warm. He hadn't been warm since. That was Ben Corvet's fault. Ben Corvet better be 'round now; Luke wouldn't stand any more.

Alan felt of the pulse again; he opened the coat and under-fannels and felt the heaving chest. He went to the hall and looked in the telephone directory. He remembered the name of the drugist on the corner of Clark street and he telephoned him, giving the number on Astor street.

"I want a doctor right away," he said. "Any good doctor; the one that you can get quickest." The drugist promised that a physician would be there within a quarter of an hour. Alan went back to Luke, who was silent now except for the gasp of his breath; he did not answer when Alan spoke to him, except to ask for whiskey. Alan stood watching a strange, sinking tremor shaking him. This man had come there to make a claim—a claim which many times before, apparently, Benjamin Corvet had admitted. Luke came to Ben Corvet for money which he always got—all he wanted—the alternative to giving which was that Luke would "talk." Blackmail, that meant, of course; blackmail which not only Luke had told of but which Wassaquum too had admitted, as Alan now realized. Money for blackmail—that was the reason for that thousand dollars in cash which Benjamin Corvet always kept at the house.

Alan turned with a sudden shiver of revulsion toward his father's chair in place before the hearth; there for hours each day his father had sat with a book or staring into the fire always with what this man knew hanging over him, always arming against it with the thousand dollars ready for this man, whenever he came. Meeting blackmail, paying blackmail for as long as Wassaquum had been in the house, for as long as it took to make the once muscular powerful figure of the sailor who threatened to "talk" into the swollen whiskey-soaked hulk of the man dying now on the lounge.

For his state that day the man blamed Benjamin Corvet. Alan, forcing himself to touch the swollen face, shuddered at thought of the truth underlying that accusation. Benjamin Corvet's act—whatever it might be, that this man knew—undoubtedly had destroyed not only him who paid the blackmail but him who received it; the effect of that act was still going on, destroying, blighting. His threat of revenge before the hearth; there for hours each day his father had sat with a book or staring into the fire always with what this man knew hanging over him, always arming against it with the thousand dollars ready for this man, whenever he came. Meeting blackmail, paying blackmail for as long as Wassaquum had been in the house, for as long as it took to make the once muscular powerful figure of the sailor who threatened to "talk" into the swollen whiskey-soaked hulk of the man dying now on the lounge.

He left Luke and went to the win-

He had called the doctor because in his first sight, of Luke he had not recognized that Luke was beyond the aid of doctors and because to summon a doctor under such circumstances was the right thing to do; but he had thought of the doctor also as a witness to anything Luke might say. But now—did he want a witness? He had no thought of concealing anything for his own sake or for his father's; but he would, at least, want the chance to determine the circumstances under which it was to be made public.

He hurried back to Luke. "What is it, Luke?" he cried to him. "What can you tell? Listen! Luke—Luke, is it about the Miwaka—the Miwaka? Luke!"

Luke had sunk into a stupor; Alan shook him and shouted in his ear without awakening response. As Alan straightened and stood hopelessly looking down at him, the telephone bell rang sharply. Constance Sherrill's voice came to him; her first words made it clear that she was at home and had just come in.

"The servants told me some one was making a disturbance beside your house a while ago," she said, "and shouting something about Mr. Corvet. Is there something wrong there? Have you discovered something?"

He shook excitedly while, holding his hand over the transmitter lest Luke should break out again and she should hear it, he wondered what he should say to her.

"Please don't ask me just now. Miss Sherrill," he managed. "I'll tell you what I can—later."

His reply, he recognized, only made her more certain that there was something the matter, but he could not add anything to it. He found Luke, when he went back to him, still in coma; the bloodshot veins stood out against the ghastly grayness of his face, and his stertorous breathing sounded through the rooms.

"Luke, is it the Miwaka—the Miwaka? Luke!"

Constance Sherrill had come in a few moments before from an afternoon reception; the servants told her at once that something was happening at Mr. Corvet's. They had heard shouts and had seen a man pounding upon the door there, but they had not taken it upon themselves to go over there. She had told the chauffeur to wait with the motor and had run at once to the telephone and called Alan; his attempt to put her off made her certain that what had happened was not finished but was still going on. Her anxiety and the sense of their responsibility for Alan overrode at once all other thought. She told the servants to call her father at the office and tell him something was wrong at Mr. Corvet's; then she called her maid and hurried out to the motor.

"To Mr. Corvet's—quickly!" she directed. Looking through the front doors of her car as it turned into Astor street, she saw a young man, carrying a doctor's case, run up the steps of Corvet's house. Constance recognized him as a young doctor who was starting in practice in the neighborhood. He was just being admitted as she and her maid reached the steps. Alan stood holding the door open and yet blocking entrance when she came up.

"You must not come in!" he denied her; but she followed the doctor so that Alan could not close the door upon her. He yielded then, and she, she started as she saw the figure upon the couch in the library, and as the sound of its heavy breathing reached her; and the wild fancy which had come to her when the servants

CHANGE "CLOTHES" IN WINTER

Animals and Birds Make Seasonal Shifts, Very Much as Does the Human Family.

Some animals and birds change their dress in winter just as we do. The ptarmigan, a bird belonging to the same family as the grouse, and who lives high up in the Scottish mountains, is one of the birds who wear a completely different dress in winter. In the summer he is a pretty yellow-brown all over, with white wings. But in winter he is almost all white. This is because there is so much snow on the high hills that if he remained brown he would be easily seen against the snow.

A neighbor of the ptarmigan in the Scottish mountains is the blue or mountain hare. In summer he is grayish brown, but when winter comes he sheds his hair and grows a new coat of pale gray and white fur. Ptarmigan even sleep on the snow when there is ground free of snow quite near, and one finds the little hollows made in the snow by their warm bodies. Some people say that white fur and white feathers are warmer than darker colors. So perhaps that is partly why some animals and birds in cold places have white winter clothes. Far north, in the arctic regions, where there is always snow and ice all the year round, most of the had told her of what was going on—a fancy that Uncle Benny had come back—was banished instantly. Alan led her into the room across from the library.

"You shouldn't have come in," he said. "I shouldn't have let you in; but—you saw him."

"Yes." "Do you know him?" "Know him?" She shook her head. "I mean, you've never seen him before?"

"No." "His name is Luke—he speaks of himself by that name. Did you ever hear my father mention a man named Luke?"

"No; never." Luke's voice cut suddenly their conversation; the doctor probably had given him some stimulant.

"Where's Ben Corvet?" Luke demanded arrogantly of the doctor. "You go—get Ben Corvet! Tell Ben Corvet I want drink right away. Tell Ben Corvet I want my thousand dollar . . ."

Constance turned swiftly to her maid. "Go out to the car and wait for me," she commanded.

Luke's muffled, heavy voice went on; moments while he fought for breath interrupted it.

"You hear me, you d—n Injin! . . . You go tell Ben Corvet I want my thousand dollars, or I make it two next time! You hear me; you go tell Ben Corvet. . . . You let me go, you d—n Injin!"

Through the doorway to the library they could see the doctor force Luke back upon the couch; Luke fought him furiously; then, suddenly as he had stirred to strength and fury, Luke collapsed again. His voice went on a moment more, and rapidly growing weaker.

"You tell Ben Corvet I want my money, or I'll tell. He knows what I'll tell. . . . Ben Corvet knows, and I know. . . . Tell him I'll tell. . . . I'll tell. . . . I'll tell!" The threatening voice stopped suddenly.

Constance, very pale, again faced Alan. "Of course, I understand," she said. "Uncle Benny has been paying blackmail to this man. For years, perhaps. . . . She repeated the word after an instant, in a frightened voice, 'Blackmail!'"

"Won't you please go, Miss Sherrill?" Alan urged her. "It was good of you to come; but you mustn't stay now. He's—he's dying, of course."

She seated herself upon a chair. "I'm going to stay with you," she said simply. It was not, she knew, to share the waiting for the man in the next room to die; in that, of itself, there could be nothing for him to feel. It was to be with him while realization which had come to her was settling upon him, too—realization of what this meant to him. He was realizing it; it made him, at moments, forget her while, listening for sounds from the other room, he paced back and forth beside the table or stood staring away, clinging to the portieres. He left her presently, and went across the hall to the doctor.

"Is he dead?" Constance heard him ask.

"Not yet," the doctor answered; "but it won't be long, now."

"There's nothing you can do to make him talk—bring him to himself long enough so that he will tell what he keeps threatening to tell?"

The doctor shrugged. "How many times, do you suppose, he's been drunk and still not told? Concealment is his established habit now. It's an inhibition; even in wandering, he stops short of actually telling anything."

Alan came back to Constance. Outside, the gray of dusk was spreading, and within the house it had grown dark. It was very quiet in the library; she could not even hear Luke's breathing now. Then the doctor came out to them.

"It's over," he said to Alan. "There's a law covering these cases; you may not be familiar with it. I'll make out the death certificate—pneumonia and a weak heart with alcoholism. But the police have to be notified at once; you have no choice as to that. I'll look after those things for you, if you want."

"Thank you; if you will," Alan went with the doctor to the door and saw him drive away. Returning, he drew the library portieres; then, coming back to Constance, he picked up her muff and collar from the chair where she had thrown them, and held them out to her.

"You'll go now, Miss Sherrill," he said. "Indeed, you mustn't stay here—your car's still waiting, and—you mustn't stay here. . . . In this house."

"Won't you come over home with me," she said, "and wait for father there till we can think this thing out together?"

"How Should I Know Who He Is?" He Asked.

He turned to Constance. "You're going home, Connie? I'll see you over there. I'll come back about this afternoon. Conrad."

Alan followed them to the door and closed it after them. He spread the blankets over Luke. Luke's coats, which Alan had removed, lay upon a chair, and he looked them over for marks of identification. A side pocket produced an old briar; there was nothing else. Then Alan walked restlessly about, awaiting Spearman. Spearman, he believed, knew this man; Spearman had not even ventured upon modified denial until he was certain that the man was dead; and then he had answered so as not to commit himself, pending learning from Constance what Luke had told.

"Not friends," he inquired. "You and Henry?"

Peat Second Best Fuel. Next to coal, peat is the best possible fuel. It burns longer than wood and gives more heat.

Her sweetness almost broke him down. "This . . . together. . . . Think this out! Oh, it's plain enough, isn't it? For years—for as long as Wassaquum has been here, my father has been seeing that man and paying blackmail to him twice a year, at least! He lived in that man's power. He kept money in the house for him always! It wasn't anything imaginary that hung over my father—or anything created in his own mind. It was something real—real; it was disgrace—disgrace and worse—something he deserved; and that he fought with blackmail money, like a coward! Dishonor—cowardice—blackmail!"

She drew a little nearer to him. "You didn't want me to know," she said. "You tried to put me off when I called you on the telephone; and—when I came here, you wanted me to go away before I heard. Why didn't you want me to know? If he was your father, wasn't he our friend? Mine and my father's? You must let us help you."

As she approached, he had drawn back from her. "No; this is mine!" he denied her. "Not yours or your father's. You have nothing to do with this. Didn't he try in little cowardly ways to keep you out of it? But he couldn't do that; your friendship meant too much to him; he couldn't keep away from you. But I can—I can do that! You must go out of this house; you must never come in here again!"

Her eyes filled, as she watched him; never had she liked him so much as now.

"I thought," he said almost wistfully, "it seemed to me that, whatever he had done, it must have been mostly against me. His leaving everything to me seemed to mean that I was the one that he had wronged, and that he was trying to make it up to me. But it isn't that; it can't be that! It is something much worse than that! . . . Oh, I'm glad I haven't used much of this money! . . . Hardly any—not more than I can give back! It wasn't the money and the house he left me that mattered; what he really left me was just this . . . dishonor, shame. . . ."

The doorbell rang, and Alan turned to the door and threw it open. In the dusk the figure of the man outside was not at all recognizable; but as he entered with heavy and deliberate steps passing Alan without greeting and going straight to Constance, Alan saw by the light in the hall that it was Spearman.

"What's up?" Spearman asked. "They tried to get your father at the office and then me, but neither of us was there. They got me afterward, at the club. They said you'd come over here; but that must have been more than two hours ago."

His gaze went on past her to the drawn hangings of the room to the right; and he seemed to appreciate their significance; for his face whitened under its tan, and an odd hush came suddenly upon him.

"Is it Ben, Connie?" he whispered.

"Ben . . . come back?"

He drew the curtains partly open. The light in the library had been extinguished, and the light that came from the hall swayed about the room with the movement of the curtains and gave a momentary semblance of life to the face of the man upon the couch. Spearman drew the curtains quickly together again, still holding to them and seeming for an instant to cling to them; then he shook himself together, strode into the room. He switched on the light and went directly to the couch; Alan followed him.

"He's dead?"

"Who is he?" Alan demanded.

Spearman seemed to satisfy himself first as to the answer to his question.

"How should I know who he is?" he asked. "There used to be a wheelman"

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper. Advertisement.

BROTHER BACON'S IDEA

"Grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon. "What have you to say for yourself, squeal, squeal?" asked Grandfather Porky Pig.

"Grunt, grunt, what have you to say? I'd like to know, too," said Miss Ham.

"So would I, squeal, squeal," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"And I'd like to know," said Master Pinky Pig.

"As long as we haven't anything to eat," said Pinky Pig's mother. "It is a good time to hear what Brother Bacon has to say. Of course if we had anything to eat it would be foolish to listen to him."

"Very foolish indeed, squeal, squeal," said Miss Ham.

"Extremely foolish, grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "In fact I shall use a very strong word. It would be idiotic."

"You are right, Grandfather Porky," said Sammy Sausage. "Yes, you are quite right."

"Quite," said Mrs. Pink Pig, "squeal, squeal, you are quite right."

"Of course I am right," said Grandfather Porky. "I haven't lived all these years in the pig pen not to know that I'm right in what I say. I have lived a long time with myself and myself and I agree perfectly on all important questions."

"But let young Brother Bacon speak, for this is a good time for him."

"I have an idea," said Brother Bacon, and all the pigs squealed and grunted and wiggled their little twisted tails and looked out of the corners of their eyes and winked at each other.

"Good for Brother Bacon," they shouted. "He has an idea. Hurrah for the pig with an idea, hurrah, hurrah. Three cheers."

Brother Bacon didn't mind what they said. He didn't mind what it would be idiotic to listen to him were there anything to eat. In fact he quite agreed with Grandfather Porky as far as that was concerned.

"Yes," said Brother Bacon. "I have a real idea, and I want to talk it over with all you pigs."

They all gathered about and listened to Brother Bacon.

"Of course," he began. "I'm not sure whether the farmer would agree to my suggestion, and I don't even know if he would understand if I tried in my pig fashion to explain my suggestion to him. But he might, he might. I have ideas on how to explain it to him."

"What is your suggestion?" they all squealed. "Tell it to us."

"Yes, I want to talk it over with all of you first," Brother Bacon said. "I thought it might be a good idea if I could persuade the farmer to let me go over to the neighboring Pig Pen and there call upon one of the young Miss Pigs I've seen in the distance."

"Brother Bacon has fallen in love," all the pigs squealed and they winked at each other again.

"Nonsense," said Brother Bacon.

"Then why would you go a-court-ing?" they squealed.

"Ah," said Brother Bacon. "I would go a-court-ing with the idea that my bride would help me with the marketing. I see the farmer's wife help bring in the milk and the eggs and she gathers beans and peas and so forth."

"I would have a mate to help feed me. She would be my true mate and I would teach her to be a loving, dutiful pig mate from the start."

"Your idea is no good, no good," said Porky Pig. "In the first place you're very conceited as you've no idea whether your Miss Pig would accept you. But I hope she wouldn't. For she's a pig, you know, even if she looks like a lovely bride from afar."

"No, don't let's get another pig into our pen. Why she'd eat up some of the food that we would otherwise have. And help you?"

"No, Brother Bacon, your idea is very foolish. She would not help to feed you, but would make you unhappy with her greedy ways."

And Brother Bacon agreed with Porky Pig's sentiments so he decided that there would be no Mrs. Brother Bacon—at least while he thought as he did now.

SMART SUMMER SUITS; NEW SUMMER BLOUSES

SUMMER days are long but the enthusiastic out-dooring summer of today finds them too short to allow her much time for changing from one suit to another. If she thinks more of pastimes than of clothes, she selects a suit that will do double duty and spends much of her day in it, whether in the country, on the links or in town. What she likes is a suit that is at once casual in style and neat, and fabrics this summer play into her they are always looking for something new in these infinitely varied garments. Many of them make their own blouses—enriching them with handwork, thus indulging themselves in luxuries which would be out of their reach otherwise.

ments. They allow her to choose either lively or quiet colors in dependable weaves that stand the wear and tear of everyday, rain or shine.

When these utility suits are up for consideration, tweeds, chevrons, homespuns, tricotines and twills naturally present themselves and pass in procession before the mind. Many times the tweeds find themselves chosen. They are shown in so many delightful colors. Tweed in a green heather mixture appears at the left in the suits shown, and is made with a straight coat, finger tip length and plain skirt considerably shorter than the "modish" length which reaches to the ankles. Sportswomen seem unwilling to adopt the longer skirt and some of them have not yet made even a compromise with it. Tweed and fabrics of like character call for severe simplicity in their tailoring and the model pictured has only a few bone buttons set on the patch pockets for decoration. They also serve to fasten the narrow belt at each side. Suits like this but with longer skirts and coats and without belts are immensely popular for street wear.

The pretty sleeveless jacket of cotton ratine shown at the left of the picture is a direct descendant of the sleeveless jumper dress which made an instant success last summer. It is shown in many variations, with round or "V" neck and made of many materials, none of them excelling ratine in good looks or adaptability to midsummer wear. They are slip-over garments with very long arm's eye, many of them prettily finished with simple cross-stitching in cotton yarns.

The jacket pictured has all its edges finished with a silk piping and silk-covered cord serves for its girlish and ornamental loops used with fancy buttons.

In the suit of plain and checked twill at the right of the picture, both skirt and coat are longer than in the tweed suit. This model has found many admirers in black and white, and brown and tan combinations. As to tailoring, it is as severely plain as its companion and almost identical in style.

Lingerie or plain tailored, wash silk and pongee blouses commend themselves for wear with these suits, but there is much personal liberty in their choice, which is governed by occasion and weather considerations.

DAIRY

CO-OPERATIVE BULL SOCIETY

Saunders County, Nebraska, Winner of Offer by Breeder of Pure-bred Cattle.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The bull offered by a breeder of purebred cattle near Lincoln to the first co-operative bull association to be organized in Nebraska was won by Saunders county, where an association has been formed; through the efforts of the county agent and a state dairy extension specialist, assisted by a field man of the United States Department of Agriculture.

As in other associations of this character, the members will be arranged in several groups or blocks, those in each block having about the same total number of cows and all using the same bull. This association has five blocks to start with, and as many more are planned. The separate blocks do not own the bulls, but the animals are joint property of the association, and every two years they are shifted from one block to another.

It is planned to have a novel feature in this association. The blocks will be arranged in two or more circuits, each circuit made up of three or more blocks, and paying for the bulls it uses and owning them; the biennial exchange of bulls will also be confined to the circuit; but there will be one set of officers and board of directors for the whole association, the secretary-treasurer keeping record of the receipts and obligations of each circuit. The circuit system seems to combine the advantages of small associations and a large association all in one.

When the Saunders County Bull association is ready for business, it will be given the prize bull. The association will have to pay for its other bulls, but it can well afford to do so, for this method of co-operation has been found highly profitable in many other parts of the country. Its advantages are: (1) Providing high-class bulls at low expense, and thus proving the character of the dairy herds; (2) keeping proved bulls in service for many years; and (3) making financial interest and public sentiment combine to sweep a community entirely clean of inferior sires.

The United States Department of Agriculture has given a good deal of effort to the introduction of co-operative bull associations, and stands ready to supply information thereon to anyone desiring it.

ABNORMAL TASTES IN MILK

There Are Several Factors That Impart Peculiar Flavor Besides Grazing Crops.

There are a number of plants which when eaten by the dairy cow, will transmit an unusual taste to her milk. Some of them are fed to her injudiciously by the dairymen, and others are eaten by the animal while grazing. Plants known to possess such properties are beet and turnip tops when fed in large quantities; excessive feeding of chopped roots; garlic, rape, lupines, orchids, kale, rutabagas, chicory, sorrel and pasturage on areas which have been inundated.

There are many other factors sometimes responsible for a peculiar taste in milk, such as improper sterilization of utensils, spoiled foods, brewers' grains, potato sprouts, fish meal, rape cake, flaxseed meal, poor straw, and, occasionally, medicinal agents administered to the animal.

CARING FOR SPRING CALVES

Necessary That Youngsters Be Kept Thrifty and Free From Disease and Sickness.

The good dairy calves born this spring are needed as milk cows two years from now, so the dairymen should do his part by giving these animals a chance to live and develop. Spring calves are usually harder to raise than fall calves, and since the dairymen has less time usually during this busy season to care for the calves, it is very necessary that the attention given be that most needed to keep them thrifty and free from disease and sickness.

Salt Improves Appetite. Salt improves the calf's appetite, so keep a box with clean salt in a sheltered place where the calf may eat of it freely.

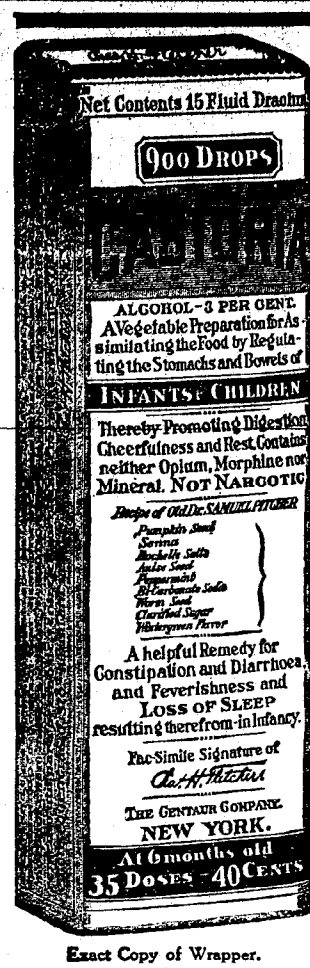

Keep Youngsters Separated. Never allow the calves or yearlings to run with the herd.

Satisfactory Cow Ration. It is quite difficult to make a really satisfactory ration for dairy cows without using either clover or alfalfa hay.

Aim of Progressive Dairymen. Instead of buying feed for low-producing cows, progressive dairymen are selling them off, buying purebred herd sires and using their feed where it will increase production.

Profit in Waste Spots. A new way to make waste lands profitable—grow timber on bad slopes, inaccessible corners, rocky lands and other "useless" places on the farm.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

OBJECTED TO SHOW PILLOWS

Usually Amiable Bachelor Had Reason for Returning From Week-End Visit With Grouch.

"Did you have a nice week-end?" inquired the sweet young thing brightly of the popular bachelor. "O, I suppose you might say so," he grumbled, with unexpected ill humor. "But I'd like to know how anybody can have a nice week-end when he can't sleep."

"What was the matter?"

"O, the usual thing—the guest pillow. How many times have I had a good night in an otherwise pleasant and comfortable room ruined by an elephantine pillow. If you lay just your head on it you break your neck; if you try to ease the slant by moving it down under your shoulders you might as well be sitting up."

"For themselves people have decently low, soft, comfortable things which are tucked out of sight in the daytime. But in the guest room the show pillows are the only pillows provided."—New York Sun.

And then in a tone of great scorn, he added: "I'll bet if we swapped he'd still say his was the biggest!"—Farm Life.

NEW NO BOSS BY THAT NAME

But Young Man Finally Figured Out Just Whom His Acquaintance Might Have Meant.

Office politics are not unknown even in the government bureau. Indeed—though perhaps this should be whispered—maybe they're better known there than anywhere else.

A bright young man holds down a very responsible job in one government unit and holds it down very capably. His nominal superior is generally recognized as merely a figurehead. Relations between the two are a bit strained.

The other day a Washingtonian, talking of the bright young man, remarked: "I nearly ran down your boss the other day in Scott circle." And he mentioned the boss by name.

The young man looked blank. "Have I a boss by that name?" he asked. "Oh, yes—I know whom you mean. We have a dead man up at the shop by that name."—Washington Post.

Contestants for Maine Governorship
Receive Light Vote; Senator Kel-

Portland, Me.—Senator Frederick Hale and Governor Percival P. Baxter were renominated by the Republicans by large pluralities in Monday's primary.

Although former Congressman Frank E. Guernsey, for senator, showed considerable strength in the eastern part of the state, Senator Hale carried the larger towns represented in these returns, including the city of Bath. Howard Davies was running far behind Guernsey. Hale carried Knox, Lincoln and Sagadahoc counties by large majorities.

Governor Baxter ran strong in all sections, with John P. Deering second and Leon F. Higgins third in the early returns. Baxter easily carried Knox and Sagadahoc counties and won in Lincoln county by about 300 votes over Deering.

St. Paul, Minn.—Senator Kellogg was given a big lead over his nearest opponent in the contest for the Republican senatorial nomination.

Chicago—"Flapperitis" is bringing about inefficient, sleep-starved and undernourished physical wrecks among modern city youths, Dr. Clarence Bartlett, president of the Pennsylvania State Homeopathic society, said Monday in an address before the American Institute of Homeopathy convention.

"On all hands we hear comments of the precocity of the youth of the present day," he declared. "Their flaunting of authority, their hours, their general habits as to hygiene, are all made subjects of comment. And we blame them for it. Really it is the parents who are to blame."

DETROIT TO GET CATHEDRAL

New Edifice to Be Built to Eclipse All Church Buildings.

Detroit—A new Catholic cathedral occupying two large city blocks costing a minimum of $5,000,000 and rivaling if not exceeding St. Patrick's cathedral in New York, long considered without peer in America in the majesty of its architecture and its interior splendor, is to be built by the diocese of Detroit.

It will front on LaSalle boulevard, with Webb avenue the northern boundary and Lawrence avenue the southern, while Burlington avenue, the dividing street of the two blocks, will be closed to permit of the cathedral occupying the center of the vast property.

SENATE PASSES NAVAL BUDGET

Bill Provides $295,450,000 for Personnel of 86,000 Men.

Washington—The annual naval appropriation bill carrying approximately $295,450,000 and providing for an enlisted personnel of 86,000 men, was passed Monday by the senate and sent to conference with the house.

Action on the enlisted personnel, now about 115,000 is final as the senate accepted the house decision and the conferees who will deal principally with senate increases of about $44,000,000 over the house bill. There was no record vote on final passage and no effort was made to reduce the enlisted personnel.

BLOOD TEST SHOWS PARENTAGE

Father Agrees to Support Child After Doctor's Testimony.

Los Angeles, Calif.—A blood test convinced Everett Campbell that he is the father of a 10-month-old girl whom he was charged with failing to support. After Dr. C. L. Thudicum had told the court that a test of the defendant's blood showed him to be the infant's father, Campbell said he would accept full responsibility and asked probation so that he might earn a living for his daughter.

WHY SUFFER FROM RHEUMATISM

Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

STATE GATHERS FINGERPRINTS OF CRIMINALS

STATE POLICE NOW HAVE A GALLERY OF "PRINTS" OF UNDESIRABLES.

MANY CRIMES THUS SOLVED

Although it is less than a year since the Michigan State Police began to perfect the identification bureau of the Department of Public Safety, a total of 8,500 fingerprints of persons convicted of crime or who have been arrested on strong suspicion of crime have been gathered in the files of the department at Lansing. In addition there are more than 4,000 photographs of criminals.

It is expected, with the co-operation of sheriffs and chiefs of police in the different counties and cities of the state, and by the courtesy of police officials in other states, that the collection of fingerprints and photographs will grow very much more rapidly in the coming year.

Modern police methods demand that identification work be made as perfect as possible. It has been proved that the systems worked out for identification of criminals are now almost infallible.

Secure Confessions.

Already the Michigan State Police have made approximately 150 identifications of criminals by means of the fingerprint records. As these records become more complete, the results will grow proportionately.

In a number of cases persons who had committed crimes made full confession when they were confronted with fingerprint evidence.

Just at present the state police are endeavoring to impress upon local police officers the necessity, when any crime has been committed to search for any fingerprints which have been left and to prevent such fingerprints being obscured before they can be photographed.

In a recent case where there was some doubt as to whether a man had committed suicide or been murdered, the state police were charged to find that the revolver found lying beside the man had been picked up and handled by numerous persons. Had it been left alone the question as to whether the dead man had fired it himself could have been absolutely determined.

All persons committed to the state prisons and reformatories are now fingerprinted. Copies of these prints are filed with the Department of Public Safety at Lansing and also sent to local officials.

Police officials of Detroit, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Flint, Highland Park and other cities are sending in copies of fingerprints taken by them, as are also the sheriffs of Washtenaw, Jackson, Lenawee, Cass, Kalamazoo, Gratiot and other counties.

Captain I. H. Marmon of the Michigan State Police has charge of the identification bureau and has trained a number of the state troopers in the taking and reading of fingerprints. He is rapidly extending this branch of the work and instructing local officers who are desirous of co-operating.

Some Good Captures.

Instances of the effectiveness of fingerprint identification are numerous. An orphanage at Adrian was burglarized and the money from the savings banks of the orphans taken. Two prints of fingers were found just inside a window which had been opened by the burglar. By the use of these prints the crime was fixed upon Ray Jackson. This man escaped from jail but was later caught at Bryan, Ohio, and sentenced to prison for a crime committed there.

At another time the state police found fingerprints on pieces of glass removed from a window which had been broken by a burglar and the crime was solved in this manner.

At other times, in rounding up suspects after a crime had been committed, escaped convicts, parole violators and old offenders were identified.

The path of the wrong-doer is growing stonier every day in Michigan.

PRISONER ESCAPED; BUT WAS SOON BACK

Getting away once was not enough to secure liberty for Frank Allen, who was arrested at Wayne, Mich., March 1 by Troopers Uthe and Hedd of the Michigan State Police and two railway detectives on a charge of having property stolen from railroad cars.

Allen got out of the Wayne jail by sawing the bars but the state police traced him to Detroit, arrested him a second time and brought him back. This time a state trooper remained in the jail.

Allen was sentenced by Justice LeBlanc of Wayne to serve 90 days in the Detroit House of Correction. He confessed and implicated others of a gang which had been stealing goods from the railroads.

BARN-BURNER IS ARRESTED

Revenge is the motive attributed in the case of Charles Jakubczyk, arrested by Troopers Frank Burmaster and George Karkeet of the Michigan State Police on the charge of burning the barn and garage of Jay Pracher at Paw Paw, March 3. The fire caused a loss of $3,000.

THE HOME OF THE SOUL.

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

A BADGE OF DISTINCTION

The Visitor: Poor fellow! Why are you wearing stripes?

The Inmate: Them's service stripes, bo, one stripe for each year I gotta serve.

A NEW ONE.

What's the matter with your wife, anyhow? She's got a case of flat tire. Whaddya mean, a flat tire? She's weary of living in a flat.

"LAUGH AND THE WORLD LAUGHS WITH YOU; WEEP AND YOU—" (BUT WHY WEEP?)

The work of three of the most competent and popular comic artists has been combined in the new comic feature, which greets readers of the AVALANCHE this week. The feature includes a cartoon by Mr. Kettner, whose pictures are in great demand from coast to coast; a comic by Charles Sughroe, creator of "Mickie, the Printer's Devil," and a comic by L. F. Van Zelm, who has made a ten-strike with his series, "Aw, What's the Use?"

This is a feature which in its class compares with the best presented by any newspaper, and we are confident that readers of the AVALANCHE will appreciate it to the extent that its quality justifies.

ANTI-TRUST LAW INCLUDES UNIONS

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS LIABLE
SAME AS CORPORATIONS,
SAYS SUPREME COURT.

DECISION COMES IN COAL TRADE

Decision Against United Mine Workers Growing Out of Strikes in 1914 Upheld by High Court.

Washington—Deciding the Colorado coal case the supreme court Monday held labor organizations although unincorporated, are amenable to the Sherman Anti-Trust act and that under its provisions such organizations may be prosecuted for restraint of interstate commerce. The court also held that labor unions are sueable. Chief Justice Taft, in announcing the decision, did not indicate any dissent.

The case which presented the questions passed upon by the court was an appeal by the United Mine Workers of America from a decision of the United States district court of Arkansas, approved by the circuit court of appeals, holding them guilty of violating the Sherman anti-trust act during coal mine strikes in Arkansas in 1914, and imposing damages of $200,000 which were trebled under the anti-trust law.

The effect of the decision will be to set aside the damages because of the finding that the acts which caused the destruction of property were not incited for the purpose of restraining interstate commerce.

During the strike lawlessness prevailed and property damage was done the Colorado and eight other mines controlled by The Bache-Denman Coal company. The United Mine Workers of America contested the jurisdiction of the federal courts on the ground that being an unincorporated association of mine workers it was not subject to prosecution under the Sherman anti-trust law.

LIVE WIRE—1043

Having just returned from the market where I have exchanged ideas with ready buyers and quick sellers I'm justified in saying you can't pick up values at your own home door such as I have selected from houses who are having their large closing out sale of the season. I've carefully looked over the various catalogues and their prices, beautiful cuts and they have stimulated me and goaded me on to quick action, and a basis of the high grade selections and at prices that will make you smile when reading the bill especially on entering this store with prices and styles to back it up, causes you to carry the smile that wears. It's not the merit of the bill, or of what is said that will benefit you. It's the doings as to prices, first at economy, last this invitation is to one and all and I am sure I will meet you face to face leaving out the old adage—You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink. Leaving out all jokes I am conscious in saying I can see you headed this way as I positively am one of the plastic type which is considered one of the drawing kind, quick sales and small profits which have lead many to fortune, last but, not least, not me.

When Headaches are Conquered

HEALTH TALK BY KELSDEN & KELSDEN, Chiropractors.

When headaches are conquered and good health returns the woman of many complaints and little charm becomes a person of vivacity and happiness. The transformation is a natural one and yet many sufferers from nervous headaches have come to believe health is not for them.

Headaches are of various kinds, but the nervous headache usually is accompanied by nausea and vomiting with evidence of liver and stomach disorder. Where the case is chronic rather than one due to temporary overeating there is certain to be found a spinal condition making Chiropractic spinal adjustments a necessity if the cause of the ailment is to be removed and any degree of good health obtained.

Headache and Nervousness Gone.

"For three years I suffered with bad sick headaches and nervousness. Thanks to Chiropractic my headaches and nervousness have left me entirely." Mrs. Mary E. Baily, Chiropractic Research Bureau Statement No. 131631.

MAY FINE SHIPS SELLING LIQUOR

SHIP SUBSIDY BILL AMENDMENT WOULD ASSESS $10,000 REWARD OF REGISTRY.

BARRED AFTER SECOND OFFENSE

Daugherty Asked for Ruling Whether Ships Beyond 3-Mile Limit Come Within Dry Law.

Washington—An amendment to the ship subsidy bill, imposing a fine of $10,000 on any ship of whatever registry on which liquor is sold on a voyage starting or ending at an American port, has been presented to Republican members of the house merchant marine committee.

Proposed as a substitute for an amendment offered by Representative Bankhead of Alabama which would deny any part of the subsidy to ships selling liquor, the amendment provides that upon imposition of a second $10,000 fine the particular ship would not be permitted to enter an American port.

Indications were given at the treasury that Attorney General Daugherty would be asked to rule whether ships under the American flag but beyond the three-mile limit were subject to the prohibition amendment and the Volstead act.

Representative Cooper, Republican, Ohio, first in a statement and later in a speech in the house, declared continuation of the selling of liquor on American boats "justified the charge made by the Anheuser Busch company that Uncle Sam is engaged in bootlegging."

"No one will deny that the lawbreaker and the bootlegger in our land will be encouraged to carry on his work by reason of the policy of the shipping board," said Mr. Cooper. "For it places the government in the position of admitting its inability and unwillingness to enforce its own laws."

Mr. Cooper added that the shipping board has no more right to permit liquor to be sold on government owned ships operating under the American flag than the moonshiner and bootlegger at home has to dispense his whisky and raisin juice.

Niagara Falls—Judge Charles H. Piper has eliminated the word "obey" from the marriage ceremonies performed by him as police justice. "Wives never obey their husbands anyway," said the judge, "so why make the ceremony ridiculous by including the injunction?"

Apples and Cherries On Tree.

Georgetown, Del.—A tree that produced apples last year, and is filled with cherries this year, is the unusual sight on the William Bagley farm near Onanok. Crowds are visiting the farm, to view the strange tree. The tree was one of several purchased from a nursery, and was bought for an apple tree. In every appearance it is an apple tree.

Says Operators Will Confer

Cincinnati, O.—Frank Farrington, president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, stated, when informed of a statement that Illinois coal operators had definitely refused to enter into a conference with the operators of other states looking toward a settlement of the national coal strike, that he believed the "Illinois operators would go along with any reasonable plan for the settlement of the strike."

LaFollette Attacks Court Decision

Washington—Declaring that the supreme court decision in the Coronado coal case was the "most ominous in what it foreshadows for the future of union labor in this country," Senator LaFollette, Republican, Wisconsin, issued a statement in which he criticized the court. The opinion, he stated, was "significant because of what the court says on questions not involved in the case rather than because of anything that is actually decided."

235,883 Widows in Paris.

Paris—In Paris there are 235,883 widows and 50,892 widowers. These figures, which have been extracted from the recent census returns, show more clearly than anything else could do what the war cost the French capital. Among the unwed, too, there is a majority of 100,000 women out of a total of both sexes of 1,200,000. Men who have been divorced by their wives number 16,700, while divorced women living in the capital total the much bigger figure of 28,700.

Figgles Has His Beard Cut

Dublin—Darrell Figgles places responsibility for the attack on him, when several men cut off his beard, on the anti-treaty leaders. He declared his assailants told him they were acting under army orders. "I asked them if they realized what disgrace would be thrown on Ireland's name when the news of the outrage got abroad," he declared. "They could not be deterred, however, and would have cut off my hair as well as my beard but for the intervention of Mrs. Figgles."

True Detective Stories

THE SECRET OF HOLMEHURST

Copyright by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

THE discovery of the body of F. F. Perry in his home at 1318 Callowhill street, Philadelphia, by a man who had come in to see about securing a patent, did not cause any sensation at the time, for the coroner's jury gave a speedy verdict of "death from accidental causes." There was clear evidence that some sort of an explosion had taken place. A shattered bottle which had manifested some sort of inflammable material, a broken pipe filled with partly burned tobacco and a charred match, lay beside the body.

An autopsy showed that Perry had died from congestion of the lungs caused by the inhaling of fumes of chloroform, the latter having presumably formed the contents of the broken bottle. So, as there were no claimants for the body and no estate, Perry's remains were interred in the Potter's field. There they would have remained undisturbed if it had not been for the evidence of a convict in the St. Louis prison.

Shortly after Perry's death, the Philadelphia branch of the Fidelity Insurance company received a letter from Jephtha D. Howe, an attorney in St. Louis, stating that "B. F. Perry" was really Benjamin F. Pitezel, who had carried a $10,000 life insurance with the Fidelity company. The only person who could be found to identify the body was a man named H. H. Holmes, of Wilmette, Ill., who willingly came to Philadelphia to substantiate the exhuming of the body. Holmes and Howe met in the office of the company, presumably as strangers, and the former clearly identified the body of the dead man as that of his friend, Pitezel. Satisfied, the insurance company paid the insurance to Howe, Pitezel's attorney, and reimbursed Holmes for his expenses.

The details of the case were reported in the St. Louis newspapers, and a few days later, Marion Hedgspeth, a convict serving a sentence for train robbery, informed the governor of the prison that he would like to give him some information which he considered most important.

"If you will examine the records of the prison," said Hedgspeth, "you will find that there was a man here last summer by the name of H. H. Howard. He was in for fraud, I think, but was released on bail. While he was here, Howard asked me if I knew any lawyer whom I could recommend in connection with a swindling scheme which he had in mind—a plan which ought to net at least $10,000 without any trouble. He promised me $500 for my information and I gave him the lawyer's name, but I never got my five hundred."

"The name of the lawyer I recommended to 'Howard' was Jephtha D. Howe and 'Howard' is undoubtedly the man named Holmes who is mixed up with that insurance case in Philadelphia! The details of the case agree exactly with the scheme, as Howard outlined it to me last summer."

As soon as this information reached Philadelphia, the insurance company detailed an experienced detective named Geyer to arrest Holmes and to investigate his antecedents, for it was clear that Pitezel had not met his death through accident, but had been deliberately murdered. After a month's search, Holmes was traced to New England and finally arrested. This, however, proved to be practically the beginning of the case, for the further back Geyer went into Holmes' history, the more gruesome details he discovered. In endeavoring to find out what had become of Mrs. Pitezel and her five children, Geyer found in the cellar of a house in Toronto—a house rented by Holmes under the name of Canning—the bodies of two children later identified as Alice and Etta Pitezel. From Toronto the trail led to Indianapolis, by way of Detroit and Cincinnati, and it was in Indianapolis that Geyer discovered the body of Howard Pitezel, aged ten, jammed into the chimney of the furnace in a house which had been rented some time before by a man who answered to the description of Holmes.

It was in the course of his search through Indiana and Illinois that Geyer came upon the most startling discovery of the entire case—the mysterious building in Chicago known as "Holmes' Castle" or "Holmehurst." The prisoner had personally superintended the erection of this structure and investigation proved that it contained an air-proof, sound-proof vault, communicating with the cellar by means of a secret staircase. Buried in the cellar floor and half-consumed by quicklime were found the remains of at least five persons who had been buried to Holmehurst and there murdered.

All of these crimes had been committed some time before the Pitezel affair, and had it not been for the fact that Holmes overlooked the promise which he had made to a convict in the St. Louis prison, it is quite possible that he would have remained at liberty, a constant and deadly peril to everyone with whom he came in contact.

But Detective Geyer returned to Philadelphia with more than enough evidence to secure conviction, and Holmes paid the penalty for his crime on the gallows.

Where the Lawyers Won

One of the most celebrated legal cases of American history was the so-called "Jones County Calf Case," which was tried six times in Jones County, Iowa, between the years of 1877 and 1889. The original trial was for malicious prosecution, arising out of the alleged depredations of some calves. On each trial, with one exception, the plaintiff secured a verdict of at least $1,000, and once his recovery was $7,500. The court costs were estimated at $3,500, and the value of the calves which were responsible for the whole fracas was $45.

Put Pony's Comfort First. One Sunday afternoon when I was ten years old my beau came over to take me for a ride in his pony cart. I took my new red parasol along, as it was a very hot day. On the way home my beau thought it was too hot for his pony so he took my parasol and climbed on the pony's back and held it over the pony's head. I was left sitting alone in the cart, with not even a hat on my head. This ended my first love affair. —Chicago Journal.

SWAM MEUSE UNDER FIRE

Sergt. M. Waldo Hatler of Joplin, Mo., Wears Medals for World War Bravery.

In the fighting in France Sergt. M. Waldo Hatler of Joplin, Mo., swam the Meuse river under fire after a comrade had perished in the attempt, handed within the German lines and explored their positions thoroughly and swam back across the river with information of great value to the American command. For this he has received the croce di guerra of Italy, the equivalent of the French croix de guerre.

Hatler met Gen. Armando Diaz, commander in chief of the Italian armies in the World War, at the third national convention of the American Legion in Kansas City. After this meeting the Italian decoration was presented at a special ceremony in Joplin. The Missouri also wears the American Medal of Honor and the French croix de guerre.

This imposing title is borne by C. E. Cronkite of Los Angeles, Cal., formerly first lieutenant in the Three Hundred and Twenty-second field signal battalion.

Miss Viola Bissell Wins Contest Sponsored by American Legion Department of Panama.

The "Queen of the Canal Zone" has been chosen through an election sponsored by the American Legion, department of Panama. The contest was won by Miss Viola Bissell with 1,307,800 votes. According to her enthusiastic "subjects" she is of the true American type, tall, blonde and athletic. The Panamanians declare her famous smile would win in any contest over any of the beauties of America or Europe.

Slightly Deficient. Here's one that has leaked out of an O. T. C. after a couple of years or so:

A young man, a good soldier, but sadly lacking in book-learning, was up for a commission. He staggered through part of the examination to the increasing bedeviling of the officers in charge, but when it came to geographical questions his ignorance was limitless. Finally one of the officers, after listening to a piece of astounding misinformation, jumped to his feet and thundered: "My sainted aunt's black cat! Here you are—say you want to defend your country—and, by the whiskers of a ring-toed monkey, you don't even know where it is!" —American Legion Weekly.

Middle West National Cemetery. On the prairies of the Platte river in Nebraska is located the only national cemetery in the Middle West—that of Fort McPherson. Here under the cottonwoods and evergreens of the plains lie the dead of the American wars of the west. Recently 15 of the World War dead from France have been buried there by Fort McPherson post of the American Legion. On 361 of the earlier grave markers is the single word, "Unknown."

"We Aim to Please." Convict No. 711—I hear Bill the Mugg is out again and that he's the most popular hold-up guy in Chicago.

Veterans' Bureau is Busy. The United States veterans' bureau, established as an independent government organization after a three years' fight by the American Legion, is now handling insurance and compensation cases throughout America and in 70 foreign countries where American soldiers or their dependents reside. In one month 13,000 insurance and compensation checks, having a cash value of $50,000, were mailed to foreign countries.

THE HOME RADIO

How to Make and Use It By A. HYATT VERRILL

AERIALS AND HOW TO INSTALL THEM

One of the greatest advantages of wireless telephone receivers is that an elaborate or expensive aerial is not required. Although good sets with vacuum bulb detectors may be used with an indoor aerial, or even with a bedstead or wire spring as an aerial, yet an outside aerial will always give better results. As I have already mentioned, a single wire will do as well as several, the main thing being to get the aerial long and high in order to catch waves which are not interrupted or interfered with by surrounding buildings, steel bridges, electric wires and similar objects. Next, or rather most important, is to have the aerial and lead-in thoroughly insulated from all surrounding objects, for even wood, when damp, is an excellent conductor. The best material for an amateur aerial for receiving is a stranded phosphor bronze or copper wire, about No. 14, although solid copper wire, copper-covered steel wire or even insulated copper wire will serve every purpose. For insulators, use porcelain cleats. These may be used both where the lead-in is attached to walls or other objects, and where the aerial wire is attached to the supports or guys. The accompanying figures, No. 9 and No. 10, illustrate aerials installed, the first showing the wire attached to a chimney or similar structure and to a wall; the other, an aerial which is designed for a tin or slate roof and which involves making holes for attachment. Where the lead-in wire enters the building it should be of rubber insulated wire and may be brought in at the corner of a window, either by cutting a small groove or by jamming the window down until the wire flattens and is buried partly in the wood. All joints in the aerial and lead-in should be scraped bright, tightly twisted and soldered, finally being wrapped with insulating or adhesive tape or covered with "spaghetti" tubing. For the best results, be sure to run your lead-in from the end of aerials towards the station which you most frequently wish to hear or towards the most distant station which you desire to pick up. Very often, this will make a vast difference in results, especially with a small receiving set. Care in following directions will insure good results.

MORE ABOUT AERIALS

If there are several sending stations at various points from your set, it is often a very good plan to run several aerial wires at right angles or radiating as shown in figures 11 and 12, connecting them together and running the lead-in from the point where all join, as shown. Sometimes this principle may be reversed and several lead-ins may be carried from the outer ends of the radiating aerials and joined to form a single lead-in and will bring even better results, figures 13 and 14. These several lead-ins may be connected by means of an anchoring ring, figure 15, to equalize the waves or currents, or they may be provided with multiple point switches as shown in figures 13 and 14. This switch arrangement has the great advantage that you can largely cut out stations you do not wish to hear by using the lead-in towards the station you desire to hear. This will result in the others being fainter or weaker in comparison and they can therefore be more effectively telegraphic spark signals from some station and yet, merely by altering the direction of their aerial or the position of the lead-in they could hear everything perfectly. So you see, a great deal may depend upon the simple aerial, even if it consists of only a single wire. On the other hand, many amateurs have obtained splendid results with a wire run around the walls of a room near the ceiling; a wire run through a hallway; a wire dropped down an air-shaft or elevator-shaft, or even from an iron bedstead or bed-spring. It all depends so much upon local and climatic conditions, surroundings and other conditions that no hard and fast rules can be made, but despite all this, nine times out of ten, a high aerial, well above surrounding buildings and from 100 to 150 feet long, will give the best results. But remember that if there are elevated tracks, steel bridges, trolley lines, electric wires or steel structures near, your aerial at right angles should run your aerial at right angles to them in order to avoid failure through leakage or induction. You must also bear in mind that the "ground" is almost as important as the aerial, for without a good ground the set will not work. A water, steam, or gas pipe will usually make an excellent ground, but before using it be sure there is no insulated joint between the connection of your wires and the earth or that the pipe does not enter an earthen or the pipe near the ground or in the cellar. In making the ground connection, scrape the pipe clean and bright and solder the wire to it. If this is not possible, wind the connection with tin-foil and fine wire and wrap it with adhesive tape. Where no pipe is available carry the ground wire to a sheet of copper, an old copper boiler or a copper tank or basin filled with charcoal and buried at least five feet under the surface of the earth. A lightning rod or fire escape will sometimes make a very good ground. But it is not so much what you use for a ground as how good the connections are and how well the object is grounded. Do not use an electric light or telephone, telegraph or door bell wire for a ground. To repeat, be careful of your connections and sure of your grounding.

Radio for the Heathen

From an announcement by the Union college, missionaries will have an easy trail to travel in the future. It has been said many times that radio has a niche in every line of human endeavor, and it is only a matter of time before its usefulness will be realized. Every day seems to prove the truthfulness and foresight of this statement. Here we have the announcement of radio's most unusual adaptation, "Radio for Heathens."

LAY OFF LIGHT POLES

Electric light companies using high-tension circuits are warning radio amateurs to "lay off their pole lines." It is dangerous. Aerials attached to high-tension line poles will pick up by induction enough of the high voltage "juice" to do a very good electrocution or start something that the fire department will have to finish. Wash poles, trees, chimneys are recommended, but the fellow that uses a strange pole is flirting with a trip through space.

Radio for the Heathen

transmitting station a missionary would be able to reach remote sections of his field frequently and give encouragement to native converts. Prominent missionary workers are watching the development of radio in the expectation that the time is not far off when it will be practical for their work in distant lands.

Enter the Air-O-Phone.

A radio concert was given in the office of Walter M. Ballard of Washington over the newest of radio inventions, the "air-o-phone." This new type outfit has a special patent loop, doing away with the outside aerial. The loop is arranged on a pedestal and can be set in any part of a room inside the house or hall. It can be used when the walls are not more than seven feet thick. Another feature of the outfit is that it does not require a ground wire.

GAINS 8 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS' TIME

Dyspepsia Entirely Overcome and She Eats, Sleeps and Feels Better Than in Years, Says Boston Resident.

"I have actually gained eight pounds in two weeks' time and am now eating better, sleeping better and feeling better than I have in three or four years," said Mrs. Celeste Fell, 82 Prince street, Boston, Mass., recently, in telling of the great benefits she has derived from the use of Tanlac.

"My stomach was in such a bad fix before I took Tanlac that I did not dare eat much of anything, for if I did I would have so much pain and distress from indigestion that I felt like I was going to die. I was so run down and weak from lack of nourishment that I could not do my housework. I was so nervous I couldn't keep still during the day nor sleep at night. I can see now if it had not been for Tanlac I would have had to give up entirely. I am now feeling strong and healthy and all the credit belongs to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

AM. ADVENTURE IN PUBLIC EDUCATION.

ed out the extravagance of people in other and less important things. For instance he stated that the public paid out twice as much each year for face powders and cosmetics as is paid for higher education. In Michigan 3 million dollars annually are paid for perfumes, 30 millions for movies, 30 millions for candies, 65 millions for cigars and tobacco and 65 millions for cigarettes, while the total sum paid for higher education in the state is but 43 millions.

To the class he stated that with the privilege of graduation comes a duty to pay back to the state the amount of money it has spent on their education; this to be done in service for the good of the public.

He closed his address by reading a short quotation entitled "Whistle." The diplomas were handed out to the class by Dr. C. R. Keyport, president of the school board. He assured the class of the high esteem in which they are held by the Board and said that each year the classes and in fact the whole school are appreciated more and more by the Board.

Much pleasure was added to the evening by musical numbers. The professional was played by the school orchestra and Mrs. Roy Milnes sang a solo, after which Supt. Smith introduced the speaker of the evening.
Following Prof. Woody's address there was a trio by Mrs. Milnes, Mrs. Bebb and Miss Estabrook which was a special treat and a delight. Miss Thompson accompanied on the piano.

GRAYLING WINS FROM K. OF CS. (Continued from first page.)

12 frames. The longer he was in the box the better he got, and it seemed that no matter how good the batsman they couldn't get by him. His teammates supported him in shipshape. The Kayes had a strong line-up and played fine ball, but not one of their men reached the second bag during the whole game. Grayling succeeded in squeezing out six hits from Urban pitching for the visitors, who also made a fine showing in the box for his team. The score for Saturday's game by innings was:

Batteries for Grayling Laurant and Johnson; for Bay City, Urban and Martin.

Struck out by Laurant 7; by Urban 10.
First on balls—off Laurant 1; off Urban 3.

Umpire—Duclos.
Sunday's game came no ways near being anything like the game of the day previous. It seemed as tho our boys had not awakened until the third inning, when Bay City had already piled up seven scores, due mostly to errors in the infield. After the third frame they tightened up and the visitors were unable to score again during the remainder of the game. It looked bad for Grayling in the third inning although they had three runs to their credit. With continual plugging, adding a run in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the seventh they tied the score; and in the next frame five more brot Grayling in a long lead and the game ended 12 to 7.

Grayling's moundmen for the day was Noa who when he got in form kept the visitors thinking some. Grayling's line-up was somewhat changed for these games due to Almer Smith Grayling's second baseman having his collarbone broken, during a practice game one night last week. Nelson played the first sack, Roy Milnes second and W. Laurant third.

On Sunday, the largest crowd of the season was out, and made one think of ye olden days of base ball in Grayling, and the citizens band added spice to the game by rendering several pieces.

The score for Sunday's game was as follows:
Bay City—1 6 0 0 0 0 0 0 7-5-6
Grayling—1 2 0 1 0 2 5 x-12-11-8

Batteries for Grayling, Noa and Johnson; for Bay City, Ebbes, Martin and Urban.

Struck by Noa, 5; by Ebbes 3; by Urban 3.

Umpires, Duclos ball and strikes. Gothro, bases.

Next Sunday the Grayling team will go to Cheboygan to play the team of that city who have almost as good a record as Grayling this season.

Grayling have won every game played this season, making nine straight triumphs.

THE HOME OF THE SOUL.

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

The Race Victory at INDIANAPOLIS The Road Victory at WICHITA Help You Choose Tires

500 miles at 94.48 miles an hour—a relentless grind over a rough-finished, sun-baked concrete and brick pavement at record-breaking speed—that is the gruelling test Oldfield Cord Tires underwent successfully at Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. They were on the winner's car for the third successive year and on eight of the ten finishing in the money, upholding the confidence successful race drivers have in the trustworthiness and ability of these tires to meet the greatest demands of speed, endurance and safety. Their records in every other important race have been equally as good.

Consider this achievement along with another test of Oldfield quality made at Wichita, Kansas, this past winter and early spring.

34,525 miles on rutted, icy Kansas roads, running day and night on a Studebaker stock car without a single tire change. This test was made by a group of Wichita automotive dealers in a tire, oil and gasoline economy run.

Mayor Kemp of Wichita was official observer and made affidavit to the mileage and service given by Oldfield tires.

You may never subject your tires to the gruelling experience of Indianapolis nor the steady grind of bad winter roads, but it is good to know you can get such safety and mileage economy by buying Oldfield tires. Ask your nearest dealer.
